Coming Out Parties Still the Main Attraction.

TWO BALLS ON FOR COMING WEEK

Miss Edson and Miss Wood Presented Yesterday.

OTHER. TIMELY TOPICS

The past week has been full of interest he coming-out teas and incidentals thereto having the center of the stage, with all agreed to give them the best of it. The rush of small events goes blithely on and the energy shown by the desire to exchange calls, official and otherwise, among the grandees shows that there is being reserved strength and leisure for more engaging pur-suits later on. About the same program may be followed next week, with the variation of two balls, the first small and early, which is set for Friday night at Rauscher's, and Mrs. Clover's juvenile fancy dress ball which is set for Friday night at Rauscher's, and Mrs. Clover's juvenile fancy dress ball next Saturday afternoon. Outside of the joy this party gives the real stars in the gay pageant, it is no less a spectacle to the few lookers-on whom Mrs. Clover is al. e to ask, for every inch of her spacious house seems needed by the little folks. The ball this year will be prettier than ever, and the costumes have been the topics of much concern and ingenuity for weeks past.

The small and early dances are to begin at 9, and the patronesses are Mrs. Hay, Mrs. J. S. Ward, Mrs. A. E. Bates, Mrs. J. L. M. Curry and Mrs. Archibald Hopkins. Three later dates are arranged for, January 5 and 26 and February 16.

The home of Nr. and Mrs. Joseph Romanzo Edson, 1705 Q street, was thronged to the very walls yesterday afternoon by the charming gathering of friends present to honor Miss Loraine Edson's debut in society. The debutante, whose intellectual gifts are as marked as her personal charms, graduated from Vassar last June, and is talented both as a musician and linguist. Her coming-out dress was of white lace over white silk, and she carried a bunch of long-stemmed. American beauties. Bouquets from admiring friends covered the mantels and piano, which, with the profuse decoration of flowers, literally lined the rooms with blossoms. Mrs. Edson was richly gowned in black satin, trimmed in scarlet satin, under white lace, and was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Walcott, Mrs. Dall, Mrs. Tunstall, Mrs. Sidwell, Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. Macdonald, Miss Elise Painter, Miss Mary Warner, Miss Mary Pierce, Miss Sue Tunstall, Mrs. Jennie Hume, Miss Mary Lyman and Miss Edson, niece of the hostess. Miss Mabel Frye of Pitrisburg and Miss Alice Clark of Cleveland, college friends of the debutante, who are now her guerts, also assisted in the reception, which was attended by so many notables of the vesident and official world.

A correspondent writes The Star, apropos

A correspondent writes The Star, apropos of the mention in this column several weeks ago, of the debated question of precedence for the army or navy, that the best way out of the difficulty would be to allow them the ranking privilege alternate years. But the trouble at present seems to be which branch of the service shall have the honor January 1, 1909. The navy people see the way clear enough for the proper thing, but the army folks fail to see why the present custom should be reversed. The whole affair is very good-naturedly discussed, but as in the advice to the man who had invited teo many officials to dinter and some of them with a life-tenure on their office, a sudden indisposition on the part of either the admiral of the navy or the general of the army New Year morning would help amazingly and really seems to be the only way to please the sticklers and let both sides down easy. While the question of official precedence means primarily the keeping of good order and is therefore necessary and commendable, the soler thought of the people never applauds any ambitions of this kind on the part of an individual unless the context is with a foreigner. There is no backing down for an American in an emergency of that sort and foreign representatives never insist upon it, after the right fight has been made. A correspondent writes The Star, apropoupon it, after the right fight has been made.

It will not make any great difference to the country at large whether the New Year procession is made up of Admiral Dewey and staff, Gen. Miles and officers of the army, followed by the offi ers of the navy, or whether the admiral and the navy officers follow or precede Gen. Miles and the army officers, and it certainly will not settle who shall sit above who at a dinner. The average Washington host and hostess do not ordinarily invite persons whose official rank might clash any more than they arrange to have life-long enemies as partners. There might be an excuse for the latter, but there would not be any for the first, unless it would be to betray the fact of a single dinner and not several in prospect.

More than that the socially inclined in

More than that, the socially inclined in Washington manage to visit and be visited no matter how firmly they may maintain any position—and few dinner invitations go begging. A case in point happened not long ago. A great man, who has passed from public life into a professional career in another city, was wanted as a dinner guest. The host and this guest had not exchanged calls, neither had their wives. Probably the men would have done so, only the hestess in this case was overwhelmed with the dignity of her position and was waiting to be called on first. The situation was this when some advice was asked as to the next move in the game. "Will I call or will my husband?" "Don't do either if you are in a hurry Send the dinner invitation. The great man knows you already and does not know or care whether the exchange of pasteboard has been made. He is a busy man, like your husband, but he likes a dinner." And the dinner went off in great style, and all the high lights were there.
